Defense

Geopolitical tensions in Eurasia make the aerospace and defense industry crucial components of regional politics. The sector also plays an important role in the economic development of countries, particularly those in highly competitive international markets. Turkey has adopted an ambitious defense industry strategy and has rapidly increased its exports to approximately $1.5 billion in 2015. In the meantime, Ankara also has sought investments in its defense sector in order to expand its technological expertise.

Achieving business objectives in highly uncertain national and international contexts requires engaging key policymakers and stakeholders. {StratejiCo.} provides strategic advice to business leaders to establish their company's reputation, build trust-based relationships and navigate in regulatory environments.
